10. Between 27 December 1950 and 5 January 1951, the Hindenburg Kaserne was apparently still occupied by not less than 1,000 troops who wore red-bordered black epaulets with artillery insignia. Little outdoor activity was observed in the billeting area on 27 December. Four officers wearing artillery insignia left the installation on that day. Motor vehicles [REDACTED] were identified.

Two groups of 10 soldiers each received basic training in the billeting area on 3 January. Motor vehicles [REDACTED] were seen on that day. About 80 percent of the windows of all five barracks buildings were lighted after sundown. (3)

11. The Moltke Kaserne still appeared to be fully occupied. Almost all windows of the installation were lighted at dusk. Intensive training activity of troops wearing red-bordered black epaulets, some with tank insignia, was seen in the barracks yard. Six guns of about 50 mm and six guns of close to 100 mm were parked in the yard on 27 December. Motor vehicles [REDACTED] were identified. (6)

12. No changes were observed at the DAF building at Puesserkrug. Source still believed a high echelon headquarters to be located there. All windows of the building were lighted on the evening of 5 January. Some officers left the building and walked to the Fritsch Kaserne. Motor vehicles observed at the DAF building were [REDACTED]

13. The Freiherr von Fritsch Kaserne was still occupied to capacity by about 1,000 troops. Sentries observed at the two gates of the installation on 27 December wore black epaulets. A great deal of activity was seen in the billeting area. All windows of the installation were lighted after nightfall. Ambulance [REDACTED] was parked in front of the installation. (4)

14. The Krueger Kaserne still quartered troops with red-bordered black epaulets, who source believed belonged to a tank unit. Only a few soldiers were seen in the billeting area on 27 and 28 December. There was no vehicular traffic. All barracks windows were again lighted on the evening of 5 January. The noise of motors was heard from the barracks yard on that day, but no motor vehicles were seen. Source thought that the unit had been away from the installation for a field exercise. (5)

15. The ammunition dump opposite the Krueger Kaserne was brightly lighted on the evening of 5 January.
